

The Lady To Whom U R Speaking, has had several husbands, all of whom died upon their wedding night. This left her with a large amount of wealth and land. Lord Lyle is her consort. Though they have offspring, her only children, Lyle has professed no claim. She is rumored to be everything from a Necromancer to an Elvin queen in hiding. It is known she is an adept alchemist and has ties to the Fey.

Pixie Grove, it is unknown what ties the pixies of the grove of life to the Lady but they are loyal.

Graveyard of the Betrayers, this ground itself is cursed such that those lain here shall never know rest. It borders the lands of the Lady and magically the lands of the Fey. This binding is not physical. Thus only with the dispensation of either parties or possessing great magic may pass from beyond the graveyard to the other lands. Both may mix in the grave yard, as if it were a neutral zone. It is advised to treat all things in the grave yard as if they exist both within the lands of mortals and of the Fey. It is rumored that both the Fey and the Don curse those that betray them to spend eternity within these grounds.

The river of No Man's Land may only be crossed by a magic bridge.

A Wampus is a magical creature that teleports to a random room within its cavern when ever a door is opened within its cavern.

The Cave of Death is strong with the dark side. Luke failed his test there. The Necromancer of Runelore has possessed this cave. As entering it is death, it is not marked. Do not enter upon pain of death.